Australia Speeds DP Adjustment

The Government of Australia is carrying out an elaborate program to speed the readjustment of 150,000 immigrants with as little disturbance as possible to the economic well-being of its established population. The migrant from the displaced persons camps of Europe comes to Australia today not as a mere fugitive from oppression, but by the specific invitation of a nation that realized eight years ago how pitifully at the mercy of her enemies her empty spaces placed her, how ill-equipped she was with skilled hands to take full advantage of the impetus that war had given to her industrial development.

Accordingly, Australia planned an immigration program on lines that left nothing to chance. Those plans embraced not only the rapid obtaining of immigrants, but their rapid absorption into the Australian way of life, says the New York Times.

The obtaining of immigrants presented difficulties, but they were quickly overcome. That is proved by the fact that in the three years from 1947 through 1949, Australia increased her population by 200,000, the Australian Government's publication Southwest Pacific says.

The problem of rapid assimilation of the strangers then came to the fore. The authorities concluded, from the time an agreement was signed in 1947 with the International Refugee Organization to accept 150,000 displaced persons from Europe, that the key to the country's proper absorption of the new arrivals would be a knowledge of English. To carry out the "Australianization process," therefore, selection teams were sent to Europe to choose refugees for migration.

While waiting in the I. R. O. [illegible] through talks, pamphlets, films and posters to learn something about the country to which they are going. Radio programs in their own languages direct from Australia also are made available to them. By mingling with English-speaking groups, the migrants become accustomed to the sound of spoken English.

At the pre-embarkation centers near Naples, Italy, from which all migrants to Australia sail, a team of instructors offers a brief curriculum to the refugees during the few weeks they are in the centers. They attend daily classes in rudimentary English, receive literature written in simple English and attend talks and movies on Australian history, geography and customs.

Even after the migrants board ship, they are helped to continue their studies. The chief training, however, starts when they reach Australia. There they are taken to an immigration and training center, where they spend three or four weeks and receive a course of study specifically arranged for them by the Commonwealth Office of Education.

This includes not only English lessons, but instruction in the English system of weights and measures and in the Australian monetary system. At the end of that period, jobs are allocated to the newcomers, but the effort to make their adjustment as easy as possi-

Helped To Found PM Newspaper

Louis S. Weiss, fifty-six, attorney for Marshall Field 3d and chairman of the board of directors of the New School for Social Research, died at his home, 262 Central Park West, New York. He also had a home in Westport, Conn.

Mr. Weiss, who practiced law in New York for thirty years, was a member of the firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton and Garrison, 61 Broadway. He was a specialist in corporation, domestic relations and newspaper laws. He was counsel and director of numerous charitable and inter-racial groups.

As a representative of Mr. Field, Mr. Weiss played an important role in the founding in 1940 of the tabloid newspaper PM, of which he was general counsel and treasurer until Mr. Field discontinued its publication. Mr. Weiss served in similar capacities for "The Star," which succeeded PM.

Mr. Weiss was secretary and a director of the Field Foundation, of 250 Park Avenue, which contributes money to child welfare and interracial causes. Mr. Field is the president of the foundation. Mr. Weiss was also one of the seven directors of Field Enterprises, Inc., owner and operator of "The Chicago Sun-Times" and a holding company for various other Field publishing enterprises, says the New York Herald Tribune.

He was vice-president and director of the United States Committee for the Care of European Children, chairman of the legal defense committee of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and a director of the American Council of the National Opinion Research Center, Denver.

Mr. Weiss was born in New York, a son of the late Samuel William Weiss and the late Carrie Stix Weiss. He attended Horace [illegible] years later [illegible] a law degree from Columbia University Law School, where he was chairman of the board of editors of "The Columbia Law Review." In 1920 he became associated with the New York firm of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett.

In 1923 he formed the firm of Weiss and Wharton and in 1924 he was a state Deputy Attorney General in Nassau County. He was a director of Seeman Brothers, wholesale grocers; Simon & Schuster, publishers, and Pocket Books, Inc. Mr. Weiss was a member of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and the New York County Lawyers Association. He belonged to the Yale Club, Lawyers Club and the City Club.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Aline Pollitzer Weiss; three daughters, Mrs. Edwin L. Goldwasser, of Berkeley, Calif.; Mrs. Robert S. Merrill, of Chicago, Ill., and Miss Katherine Weiss, of New York; a son, William Pollitzer Weiss, of Cambridge, Mass.; two sisters, Mrs. Nina Weiss Stern and Mrs. Carol Weiss King, both of New York, and three grandchildren.

Says Problem Of U.S. Jews Is "Group Slander"

Two prominent Jewish communal leaders, the heads of major national Jewish organizations, speaking in Cincinnati, Ohio, called for the resurgence of "a militant democracy to sweep away our totalitarian enemies of the right and left." At the same time, they stressed that Judaism and all forms of totalitarianism were incompatible.

The speakers were Jacob Blaustein, president of the American Jewish Committee; and Supreme Court Justice Meier Steinbrink, of New York, national chairman of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith. Four hundred delegates attended the fifth annual meeting of the National Council of the Joint Defense Appeal at which they spoke.

The delegates, representing forty-one States, devoted the sessions to enlisting widespread community support of the programs of both groups for "strengthening democratic liberties." The Joint Defense Appeal is the fund-raising arm of these organizations.

The principal problem confronting American Jews and other minorities, Justice Steinbrink said, is "group slander." "The campaign thus far has been carried forward on a retail level of smearing individuals. Now it has entered the wholesale business of smearing them by groups." Justice Steinbrink urged the liberal forces to "retain their grip in the fight against Communism," and to prevent the "neo-fascists from seizing control of the struggle."

"It is ironic," he continued, "that while the bigots are smearing minorities as Communist, the American Communist party has complained bitterly that it has failed utterly to win Jews and other minorities to the Communist banner." [illegible] most in the Communist press, "Political Affairs," written by John Williamson, one of the eleven Communist leaders convicted in New York, in which he assailed his party's failure to involve Jews in Communist-supported "peace" movements, reports the New York Times.

In stressing the antipathy that the Jewish people have for Communism, Justice Steinbrink asserted that "in all Russia there is no trace of formal Jewish organizations or institutions." Still further he emphasized that democracy and Judaism had common aims.

Mr. Blaustein, asserting that religious persecution and racism were the major weapons in the totalitarian arsenal, declared: "One has only to examine Communist appeals everywhere in the world to realize that racial and religious play only technically different roles in the propaganda of fascism and Communism. The Fascists promise to maintain and sanctify these prejudices. The Communists promise to eliminate them. In each case, they are exploiting them.

"As the problem of Communism grows more acute, and as popular reaction to it in terms of fundamental liberties and the decencies of democratic conduct grows more reckless, an increasing number of thoughtful Americans are realizing and insisting that the proper role of the private citizen in combating anti-Semitism is not to try to duplicate the work of the F.B.I. or to act as vigilantes." Mr. Blaustein then asserted: "Instead, the role of the citizen and all groups of citizens, as our organizations construe it, is to eliminate those sore spots in our democratic society — those fostering religious and racial hatreds and the social, economic and political discriminations resulting from them which give to Communist propaganda its attractions."

On the subject of the relationship between Israel and the American Jewish community, Mr. Blaustein declared that "fundamentally there is no incompatibility between our firm resolve to continue to strengthen and develop our Jewish communal, cultural and religious institutions in America, and at the same time aid Israel in a substantial and effective way."

"Far from being inconsistent with one another," he asserted, "the strengthening of Jewish life in America and the aiding of Israel are complementary to one another. As an indication of this, it must be apparent that American Jews would be profoundly affected by an economic catastrophe in Israel. Israel cannot meet its economic problems without aid from American Jews." By the same token, Mr. Blaustein continued, "unless the

Rosenwald Fund Works To Bring In DP Scholars

Plans for taking 2,000 scholars and professional men from displaced persons camps in Europe and settling them in fitting jobs in the U. S. are being put into effect, Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, chairman, told 100 persons at a luncheon in New York at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel under auspices of the International Rescue Committee. The campaign to help 2,000 from this group will cost $1,600,000, Dr. William S. Bernard, national director of the drive, said. He reported that $175,000 already had been subscribed, including $100,000 from the Lessing J. Rosenwald Foundation.

Dr. Niebuhr, who is dean of the faculty at Union Theological Seminary, said 450 gifted men who had spent as long as five years in refugee camps had been set on their way to America and that a few had already arrived.

Dr. Niebuhr introduced a few of the arrivals — Andre Karpinsky, a biologist who escaped from the Soviet Union; Vaclovas Sidzikauskas, former Lithuanian Minister to England; Gligor Tashkovitch, former Yugoslav Senator, and Jurgis Valaitis, a Lithuanian engineer. Many professional men have come to the U. S. from displaced persons camps under auspices of various agencies. Dr. Niebuhr said, but as a rule it has been harder to find the right place for a highly trained man than for a farm helper.

"In the International Refugee Organization camps," Dr. Niebuhr said, "there were at the last reckoning 300 architects, 470 artists, 2,000 engineers, 1,500 physicians, 150 writers, 280 teachers of art, 4,000 professors in the humanities and 496 professors in the technical sciences."

Specialist Was Head Of Military Surgeons

Dr. Samuel Joseph Kopetzky, seventy-four, ear and throat specialist and president of the Association of Military Surgeons in the United States, died in New York, at his home, 300 East Fifty-seventh Street. Dr. Kopetzky served in the volunteer infantry in the Spanish-American war and as an officer in the Medical Corps during World War I. He was decorated for gallantry in action in France, and was a colonel in the Medical Reserves after the war. During World War II he was chief of the medical branch of the New York City Selective Service System.

He was born in New York, educated at the public schools and received his medical training at the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital. After doing post-graduate work in Berlin he returned to New York to begin research on meningitis, and received the medal of the American Otological Society for research in 1912.

He was an active member of the New York State Medical Society, and a former speaker of its House of Delegates. He was also a former president of the American Rhinological Laryngological and Otological Society, editor of "New York Medical Week," chairman of the New York County Medical Society committee on publicity, and fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine, American Academy of Opthalmology and Otolaryngology and the American College of Surgeons.

Dr. Kopetzky was the author of "The Surgery of the Ear" and "Otological Surgery" and many articles and monographs on related subjects. He was formerly professor of Otolaryngology at the New York Polyclinic Medical School and Hospital.

In 1934 the French government awarded Dr. Kopetzky the cross of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his medical work in collaboration with French scientists. He was active in Jewish philanthropies, and joined with two other American physicians in purchasing land on Mt. Scopus in Jerusalem for the medical department of Hebrew University there, says the New York Herald Tribune.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Anah Doob Kopetzky; a son, Karl A. Kopetzky; a daughter, Mrs. Robert Sterling; three sisters, Mrs. Rose Doob, Mrs. Gertrude Goldsmith and Mrs. Frank Rubel, and three grandchildren.

Fled From Russia In 1918; Now Gives Millions To N.Y. Hospital

Dr. Martin R. Steinberg, director of Mount Sinai Hospital, announced that Frank Z. Atran, who was born in Russia and fled to America in 1918, has made a gift of $1,000,000 to Mount Sinai Hospital, in New York.

Mr. Atran, at present on a European tour, was described by Dr. Steinberg as the owner of a nylon-weaving plant in the U.S. and a textile business in France, where he also operates a string of dress shops.

The gift will be used to complete construction of a laboratory building on Madison Avenue between Ninety-eighth and Ninety-ninth Streets. The seven-storey structure, to be known as the Atran Laboratory Building, is expected to be completed by next September, says the New York Times.

The total of the building and equipment, according to Dr. Steinberg, will exceed $2,500,000. He said Mr. Atran's gift was made two weeks ago through the Atran Foundation, established by Mr. Atran as a "charitable foundation for education and philanthropy." The new building will be used for research as well as for other "laboratory functions," according to Dr. Steinberg.

Mr. Atran also heads the organizations known as Atrabin, Inc., and American Valfina, Inc. Mr. Atran's gift will be used as part of a $10,000,000 project that will add not only research laboratories and a large subsurface installation to the hospital's present seventeen buildings, but a maternity pavilion as well.

Two floors of the Atran building will be used for the physics department with facilities for research and routine studies of radioactive agents. Another two floors will house the departments of bacteriology and virology, and two more will be available for the chemistry department.

The two top floors will house a complete hospital for animals to be used for research. There also will be X-ray machines on this floor. Throughout the building, lecture and conference rooms are being built, as well as several auditoriums where physicians will hear and discuss the latest discoveries. Work on the project was started last March. The maternity pavilion, which will be ten stories high, will extend 160 feet on Fifth Avenue from Ninety-ninth toward Ninety-eighth Streets.

The last large recent gift announced by Mount Sinai was $50,000. It was bequeathed to the institution by Maurice Wertheim, financier, philanthropist and sportsman. There were no conditions attached to the hospital's use of the money. The hospital recently has been carrying on extensive research into cancer detection and ways to relieve cancer patients.

DEATHS

Rabbi Zvi Hirsch S. Cohen, dean of the Canadian Rabbinate, and president of the Montreal Council of Orthodox Rabbis, died on November 17, at the age of 90 years, after a lengthy illness, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harry Fierst, Mount Vernon, N. Y.. Rabbi Cohen was born in Lithuania and studied in the rabbinical seminaries of Vilna and Volozhin. He came to Montreal in 1889 to join his brother, Lazarus Cohen, and was immediately accepted as leader of the Jewish community. He was one of the organizers of the Canadian Jewish Congress and opened its first session in 1919 with a prayer. He also participated in the formation of the United Talmud Torah Hebrew School on Cadieux Street in 1896, which has since evolved to what is now known as the United Talmud Torahs of Montreal. For many years he was chairman of the board of education of this organization. During the Great War he organized the Central War Relief Society of Canada which later became the Associated Relief Organization of Canada, parallel to the present United Jewish Relief Agencies. Through his efforts, countless war victims in Europe and Palestine received assistance. Rabbi Cohen took part in the movement to settle Jewish war orphans of Ukraine in Canada. After The Great War, he helped to organize the Jewish Community Council of Montreal and instituted the present Kashruth control system. He was active in the Conference of Canadian Jews, (the forerunner of the Canadian Jewish Congress), the Mizrachi Organization of Orthodox Zionists, and the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. He founded the local Jewish [illegible] for many years. Crowds of mourners filled the synagogue of the Adath Yeshurun Congregation on St. Urbain Street where the

● HADASSAH: Ethel Epstein Ein Chapter project, "A Treasure For My Daughter", is a two-hundred and fifty page reference book on Jewish festivals, customs and traditions, presented in an informative way, not doctrinal; and includes menus and recipes for every-day and holiday use; benedictions in Hebrew, transliterated and translated; and a twenty-five-year Jewish calendar. Written in a conversational style, it presents facts on Jewish history, literature, and laws and customs. The book was begun on a suggestion by Mrs. Joseph Batist, who was program chairman at the time the chapter was formed three years ago in memory of the late Mrs. Hyman Ein. Members were to prepare papers on holidays and festivals, and it was planned to compile them in book form. Mrs. H. L. Schwartz wrote the first assignment on "The Sabbath"; and she, and Miss Shirley Epstein proposed the title, in a contest for it. In charge of articles and sections were: Mesdames S. Schwartz, R. Wittenberg, J. Batist, H. L. Schwartz, B. Miller, H. Freeman, Ralph Weintrauch, J. Steinberg, Al. Lack, M. Steinberg, H. Epstein, H. Efros; Misses Rita Kert, Shirley Epstein. Mrs. Joseph Batist was the book editor; Miss Sarah Ein, Mrs. S. Warshaw, Mrs. E. Davids were in charge of the recipe section. All proceeds of the sale of the book go towards rehabilitation of war victims and building of the new homes in Israel. Miss Shirley Epstein, Room 727, University Tower Building, Montreal, 2, will take money orders for the book. Information from Miss Sarah Ein, WI. 5290; Mrs. Joseph Batist, EL. 5880; Mrs. H. Efros, AT. 8764. Comments on the dust-jacket are by Rabbi Wilfred Shuchat, Rabbi Pinchas Hirshprung, Rabbi Maurice S. Cohen, Mesdames H. Singer, A. Raginsky, Sr.; H. Nathanson, M. B. Weinstein, Jesse J. Schwartz. Shaare Zion Chapter Chanukah card party, on Monday evening, December 11, at the Zionist Building, will give proceeds for the Negev Dinner. Mrs. S. Oberman, EL. 4179, and Mrs. B. Soroka, are conveners. Refreshments; raffle of [illegible] painting donated by Mrs. H. Binsky; and a door-prize, worth $25. Mrs. A. Bisuer is president. Mrs. M. Chisling will bless the lights. Husbands, friends, invited. Chapter meeting Monday, November 27, at 1 p. m., is: Adath Israel, dessert luncheon, at the home of Mrs. Philip Lupu, 859 Rockland Avenue. ● B'NAI BRITH HILLEL Foundation, Rabbi Samuel Cass, director: A collection of paintings and drawings is being exhibited at Hillel House, 3460 Stanley Street, beginning Sunday, November 26, at 8 p. m., by the Montreal artist, Mrs. Sylvia Ary. The exhibition, under the direction of Miss Annette Segal, Hillel art committee chairman, will last until December 10. Mrs. Ary, an expressionist painter who has given art exhibitions in Paris and throughout Europe, will include paintings of Montreal's people and streets.

● ADATH ISRAEL SYNAGOGUE Sisterhood: At the donor luncheon, on Tuesday, December 12, at 12.30 p.m., Susie Michael, musician and narrator, and Maurice Friedman, dramatic baritone, will give a program, "Cavalcade Of Jewish Music". Mrs. Robert Shiller is luncheon chairman. This fund-raising activity will give all proceeds to the new Adath Israel Academy. Names of those contributing in this campaign will be inscribed in the Golden Book. Mrs. H. J. Halperin is president.

● PYTHIAN SISTERS: Welfare Temple Number Seven, at a meeting at the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, saw Mrs. A. T. Hogan, Supreme Representative, from New Mexico; Mrs. Saul Epstein and Mrs. Saul Rogers install: Mrs. Benjamin Cofsky, past president; Mrs. Harry Marvin, president; and Mesdames Moe Seren, Isadore Perel, Samuel Kadonoff, Abe Kantner, Sol. Brookman, Harry Segal, Harry Schneider. On December 20, at 9 p. m., at Reverend M. Master's, David Weiss, executive director of the Family Welfare Department, of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, will speak on "Marriage Counselling". Mrs. Benjamin Cofsky is program chairman.

● MIZRACHI: will honor Leon Gellman, chairman of the Mizrachi World Federation, and Isaiah Bernsterin Hapoel Hamizrachi leader, and editor of the Mizrachi Hebrew daily, "Hatzofeh", at a dinner at Adath Israel Synagogue Hall, on Wednesday evening, November 29. Mr. Gelman was one of the founders, and later was president, of the Mizrachi Organization of America; and Mr. Bernstein is one of the founders of Hapoel Hamizrachi. They have both just arrived from Israel, and will report. This will be their only public appearance in Montreal. Louis Shiff, president of Montreal Mizrachi, is dinner committee chairman, assisted by: H. Tannenbaum, H. Lieberman, N. A. Levitsky, J. Atlas, L. Quint, L. Glazer, Max Greenberg, I. Singer, B. Bergless, M. Achtman, H. Dobshinsky, M. Ginsburg, B. Roisman, M. Wigdor. Reservations must be made before the dinner; call GR. 3548.

Overseas Services To Immigrants Pose Questions

BY MARCEL KOVARSKY EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, JEWISH FAMILY AND CHILDREN'S SERVICE, PITTSBURGH, PA.

One of the questions uppermost in the minds of social service staff working with new Americans is, "What interpretation can overseas workers give to persons immigrating to the United States, especially those coming on community assurances under the DP Act, which would give them some feel of the difference between the approach of the agencies in Europe and those in the United States?"

So many immigrants look upon the American agency as an extension of the Joint Distribution Committee and seem quite unprepared for the responsibilities which these agencies place on them as individual clients. They take the attitude that it is the duty of the American Jewish community to care for them, which is true in a sense, but in a very special sense.

American agencies customarily start with the premise that the primary responsibility for helping the immigrant (or any individual) rests with himself; the agency is prepared to help him, but only to the extent that he cannot help himself, and only in a manner which will increase his capacity for self-dependence. Closely associated with this philosophy is the concept that agency help should in most cases be given for a limited period. All this is very difficult for the newcomer to accept and he frequently reacts to agency limitations with the response, "Was this what you brought me to the U.S. for? Why, it was better in the concentration camp. Send me back."

I have heard any number of newcomers voice this complaint and the thing which impresses me is that regardless of the variations, I have never heard one say, "Was it for this that I came?" It is always, "Was it for this I was brought here?" I do not imply, of course, that the overseas agencies are responsible for this pattern of demanding dependency, and I recognize also that the primary responsibility for helping the client overcome it rests with the social worker in the United States.

However, I do raise the question of whether it is not possible to do more than has been done to prepare the immigrant for the realities of American life, not the least of which is the way American agencies work. And lest it be said that the agencies are the ones which should adapt to the expressed needs and attitudes of the immigrant, may I voice the conviction that the approach of the local agencies is grounded in American culture and that for them to do otherwise would serve to retard the newcomer's adjustment.

In this connection two specific suggestions have been made. One is that, over and above the verbal orientation, prospective immigrants be given a printed brochure, in a language which they can read, in which the principal points are emphasized. We have no illusions that such a device will solve the problem, but it would definitely be helpful to the social worker in the local community to know, not only in a general way that certain things are discussed with all immigrants, but that specifically thus and so has been explained to the client who is in his office. If such a leaflet could be prepared and distributed, and if copies were made available to local agencies, the social worker would have an added tool to help the newcomer hold to the reality of adjustment in the community where he is. If such a brochure is prepared, I hope it can be arranged for American social workers to participate in writing it.

The second specific suggestion relates to better preparation in English. All of us have noted that one of the principal differences between the current immigration and the preceding waves is that the present group speaks so little English upon arrival and finds it so much more difficult to acquire. Any agency can cite case after case of persons who have been in the community several months and who could find employment but for their language handicap.

The reasons for the difficulty obviously lie in the poorer opportunity for general education which this group has had. Recognizing Chevrolet's Reputation makes Chevrolet the Leader!

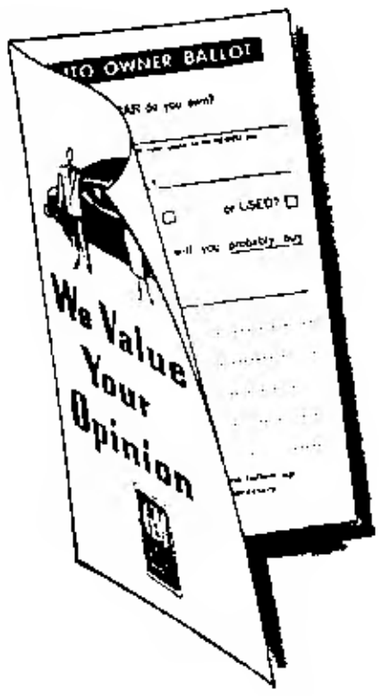
A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE



The high reputation of Chevrolet . . . its makers . . . and its dealers . . . were three main reasons why Chevrolet led all other makes in popularity according to recent impartial surveys among automobile owners!

What safer guide can there be than reputation, when it comes to choosing a motor car? For reputation is based on the day by day and year by year experience of Canadian motorists — driving their cars in every Canadian season, on every kind of Canadian road. Every car can claim top quality. But only one car can be Canada's favorite in popularity, in sales, in value — with the highest reputation in all parts of the country . . . and that's the car to buy! Recent nation-wide surveys among automobile owners have established beyond question that Chevrolet is the leading car in reputation, three ways—the high reputation of the car itself; the high reputation of its manufacturers, General Motors; and the high reputation of Chevrolet Dealers. What safer guide can there be? You simply can't go wrong when you buy the leader — Chevrolet!

this, however, and knowing how important a speaking knowledge of English is to most employment, one wonders whether a greater start on this problem could not be made overseas.

As a matter of fact, if a choice has to be made, it might be better to invest time and money in teaching the prospective immigrants English than in the trade training which, more often than not, is relatively meaningless when the newcomer tries to apply it in the American market. Frequently it is even a handicap, as a person who feels that he has been trained as a carpenter or plumber may refuse to accept other available employment even though the latter offer a more immediate opportunity for self-support.

Before leaving this part of the discussion, let me stress again that the American social worker needs to know in greater detail what can be done abroad, and specifically what kind of social work services may realistically be expected in various parts of Europe and in Israel. Recently, for example, our agency was able to obtain a very satisfactory evaluation of a person living in Vienna, both her potentialities for self-support in the United States and the specific handicaps to which she was subject if she remained.

On the other hand, we have also recently had occasion to serve a woman who came to this country with her two children from Israel, on a student visa, after separation from her husband who has since moved from Israel to Switzerland. Our ability to help this mother plan for herself and her children on a long term basis would have been facilitated had it been possible for her and her husband to have had access in Israel to a service comparable to an American family agency, which might have helped them think through their problem before they made such far-reaching and perhaps irrevocable moves.

Perhaps this is too much to expect of a new nation with all of the internal and external problems which Israel faces, but it would certainly be helpful to us as American social workers to know what consultation services are or are not available to persons planning to migrate from Israel to the United States. We had another example, not so long ago, of an aged couple who came to Pittsburgh from Israel to live with their recently arrived DP son; the difficulties they manifested which could almost certainly have been detected by a skilled interviewer abroad made it necessary to plan for their almost immediate return. At any rate, say the American social workers, let us know what services are available abroad, and where.

I should like now to turn to a problem of a somewhat different nature. Since the advent of Hitler 17 years ago, the primary emphasis of the overseas agencies, and of many of us in the United States, has been rescue — rescue through emigration. Certainly in the years preceding the war and during the war itself, no Jewish person's life was safe in Continental Europe and it was valid that all our efforts should have been focused on making it possible for Jews to leave.

There was even a period when the mere possession of an American visa registration number, even though the actual emigration might be impossible for years, had value in protecting the holder against the worst of Nazi indignities. Now the war is over, but there still remain an appreciable number of Jews in Europe — some in their native lands; some in DP camps and elsewhere in the American, British and French zones of occupation; and still others in countries of temporary refuge, such as France, Italy, the Lowlands, Great Britain and Scandinavia.

There is no question that anti-Semitism exists in greater or lesser degree in all of these countries and that many of the Jews living in Western Europe are denied the rights of citizenship and employment. Nevertheless, it still seems pertinent to ask: Shall we continue to operate on the principle that Europe holds no future for the Jew, and that therefore every Jewish person of European origin (except, perhaps, natives of the West European countries) should be helped and encouraged to emigrate, or is it sounder to make the position that there are a great many disadvantages to a Jew's remaining in Europe but that for some individuals there may also be positive values, that emigration to the United States or Israel also has its problems and difficulties, and that hence an attempt should be made to consider with each potential emigrant whether, in the light of his own individual and family situation, it is better for him to leave or stay?

Is it possible for this kind of service to be rendered by overseas agencies, on an individual basis, and free from the bias that all Jewish persons are better off elsewhere than in Europe? Another way of posing the problem is to ask whether it is possible for the overseas agencies to become less identified with emigration as the desirable step in most cases, and to evaluate all of the pros and cons with each individual family, leaving it free to make its own choice. Implied in this question, of course, is whether there exists the time and staff required for individual counselling of this type, and whether the realities are in fact such that some choice really exists for an appreciable number of families.

Lest you think my characterization of the attitudes of overseas agencies unfair, let me cite an instance which occurred several years ago when I was working in a children's agency in the Midwest. We had referred to us, for emergency placement, a ten-year-old boy who had arrived less than a week before on the affidavit of his aunt and uncle. This was a child of German birth whose parents were dead and who had spent the preceding years in an OSE-sponsored home in France.

The uncle and aunt were kindly, well-meaning people who had responded to the urging of an OSE representative that they bring over their sister's son. They were completely unprepared for the boy's attitude of extreme hostility to them and to everything American, which was characterized by severe temper tantrums, a persistent refusal to converse in any language but French, and the reiteration that he had been brought to the United States against his will and wanted to return. It so happened that shortly after his arrival a European staff member of OSE, who had known this boy quite well abroad, visited the community and we had an opportunity to discuss him with her. She told us that the boy had displayed the same behavior symptoms abroad and that he had in fact objected violently to coming to the United States.

Nevertheless, this worker, who seemed a very understanding person with a real feel for children, had felt that since he had the opportunity to come to the United States (as represented by the willingness of his relatives to provide an affidavit) he should come regardless, because "no Jewish child has a future in Europe." Even after she saw for herself the problem as it existed in the relatives' home, she held to the conclusion that regardless of the difficulties in the way of his ultimate adjustment, he was still better off in the United States and that if she had to do it again, she would make the same decision. The last I heard of the case was when plans were being made to place him in a school for emotionally disturbed children.

I think a real question can be raised whether it would not have been better for this boy to remain in Europe. The view that everyone should come to the United States because of the greater opportunities here is reminiscent of the attitude which once prevailed in children's agencies, that if a child were neglected in his own home he should be removed, through court action if necessary. We know now that even the poorest home, with the most irresponsible parents, may have positive values for the child which outweigh the external advantages of a good foster home or institution. Should we not apply the same thinking to European Jews, particularly those who may not qualify as displaced persons and who may in any event have to wait some years for the possibility of emigration?

One final question before I conclude. This concerns repatriation—its possibility and where the financial responsibility should rest. Frequently an immigrant says to us, "Send me back—it was better in the concentration camps." In most instances we recognize this as his way of expressing his dissatisfaction with the help the agency is giving. Yet occasionally there was instances where the desire seems genuine, or at least there is enough possibility of this that it would be helpful to test it out by following through concretely on the client's request. However, as things stand now we are rarely able to offer repatriation as a practical possibility.

It is not paradoxical that for those who are compelled to return to their native land (such as persons whose temporary visas have expired) the national and overseas

Social Notes — Montreal

(Additional Montreal Social Notes on Pages Two and Three)

Mr. and Mrs. M. Lerman, Clark Street, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Lawrence, who was called to the Reading of the Law at Chevra Tilem Synagogue. He is the brother of Paul. Kiddush was observed at the synagogue; and there was a dinner at Herman's. Mrs. Lerman received, wearing a cocoa-brown cocktail dress of crepe and lace, with a round neckline and rhinestone trimming, and had a corsage of yellow roses. Fall flowers in variety adorned the dinner table. M. Shapiro, Durocher Avenue, was master of ceremonies; and Lawrence, the bar-mitzvah boy; and Alec Spector, of Boston, Mass., were the speakers. Mrs. Spector was also present, with their children, Edward and Marilyn; and Judy Mintz, all of Boston.

Leonard, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Coleman, 4558 St. Dominique Street, was called to the Reading of the Law at Beth Itzchok Synagogue. He is the brother of Doris and Beatrice; and the grandson of Mrs. Molly Silverberg, 4161 Clark Street. A dinner was given at Berman's Restaurant, Mrs. Coleman receiving in a black lace gown, with full skirt and strapless bodice, covered with a matching lace jacket, and corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Silverberg, grandmother of the bar-mitzvah boy, wore a black nylon street-length gown, and a corsage of pink roses. Doris and Beatrice, sisters of the bar-mitzvah boy, were dressed alike in dusty-pink taffeta floor-length dresses, fashioned with net tops and full skirts. They had rosebuds fashioned into coronet-effect headdresses. Two centrepieces of autumn flowers decorated the head table.

Miss Sylvia Erlich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Erlich, 5945 Park Avenue, whose marriage to Frank (Levine) Paul, son of Mrs. F. Levine, Park Avenue, takes place on December 17, at Bnai Jacob Synagogue, was entertained by Mrs. J. Greenberg, Van Horne Avenue, at a tea at Morgan's Regency Room. Fall flowers were arranged for the table. Mrs. M. Lurie, Jeanne Mance Street, gave a dinner for the immediate families, at a table decorated with roses and carnations. Mrs. S. Zanger, Pratt Avenue, entertained at tea, roses and pompoms ornamenting the table. Mr. and Mrs. H. Galler, St. Urbain Street, and their son-in-law and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Schwartz, and Mr. and Mrs. L. Malkin, both of 5210 Queen Mary Road, entertained at the homes of the latter, at a dinner and evening party. The table flowers were roses and carnations. Presentations were made on each occasion.

Miss Shirley Chandler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Chandler, Laurier Avenue West, fiancee of Henry Glatt, Jeanne Mance Street, whose marriage will take place on December 10, at the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, was entertained at a tea at Berman's, at which one hundred and thirty guests were present. The hostesses were Mesdames M. Chandler, St. Urbain Street; L. Chandler, Waverley Street; Aaron Chandler, Esplanade Avenue; and H. Edelstein, Laurier Avenue West, all aunts of the bride-elect. Receiving, Mrs. M. Chandler wore a Burgundy-shaded velvet dress, with a matching hat, and corsage of pink roses; Mrs. L. Chandler, a black crepe dress, with a corsage of yellow roses; Mrs. Aaron Chandler, a black cocktail dress, with a corsage of pink roses; and Mrs. Edelstein, a taupe dress, with a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Chandler, mother of the bride-elect, wore a grey crepe dress, trimmed with beaded embroidery on the bodice; and fashioned with a heart-shaped neckline, with an inset of embroidery. She had on an American Beauty-shaded felt hat, with a corsage of red roses. The bride-elect, Miss Shirley Chandler, wore a royal-blue velvet dress, designed with a sweetheart neckline, and full skirt; a matching Juliet cap, trimmed with blue sequins, and a wristlet of pink roses. The table was arranged with gladioli, roses, and carnations, with yellow chrysanthemums. A presentation was made to the honoree.

Miss Gertrude Reisler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Reisler, Carlton Avenue, and fiancee of Aaron H. Lerner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Lerner, Edward Charles Street, whose marriage will take place on December 10, at Beth David Synagogue, was entertained at a tea in honor of her approaching marriage. The hostesses were Mrs. S. Wiseman, St. Lawrence Boulevard, her grandmother; and Mrs. M. Mendelsohn, Linton Avenue, her aunt, at whose home the tea was given. Mrs. Wiseman wore a black crepe dress, trimmed with lace, cut with a high neckline, with long sleeves; and a hat to match. Mrs. Mendelsohn had on a black Chantilly lace cocktail dress, in off-the-shoulder style. Mrs. Reisler, mother of the bride-elect, wore a navy-blue velvet suit, with a Peter Pan collar, trimmed with beading. She had a matching hat of velvet, with similar trimming. Mrs. Lerner, mother of the groom-elect, wore a brown crepe dress, designed with a V-neckline, with beading on the bodice, and side drapery on the skirt. She had a matching hat, trimmed with matching beading. Miss Reisler, the bride-elect, wore a cocoa-colored faille cocktail dress, with a high neckline, and back drapery on the skirt. Her matching hat was trimmed with beige and inserts of rhinestones. Each had a corsage of orchids. Rubin Reisler, brother of the bride-elect, took photographs of the party. The table centrepiece was composed of white and pink carnations, grouped around candles, in the centre; and there was a candelabrum, with pink candles, at each end of the table. A presentation of sterling silver flatware, service for twelve, was made.

Melvin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Handel, Mountain Sights Avenue, was called to the Reading of the Law at Congregation Anshei Ozeroff, in honor of his bar-mitzvah. He is the brother of Sheila; and grandson of Mrs. A. Caplan, Clark Street. Kiddush was observed after the ceremony; and a dinner was held at Barman's. Receiving one hundred and thirty guests, Mrs. Handel wore a black Chantilly lace dress over white satin, fashioned with a horseshoe neckline, and a matching bolero. She had a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Caplan, the grandmother, wore a black tissue faille dress, with a square neckline, and a corsage of red roses. Sheila wore a long blue taffeta dress, with a high, ruffled neckline, and rows of ruffles on the long skirt, and a crown of carnations. The table was arranged with two clusters of carnations and fall flowers in variety. The birthday cake was in the shape of an open book, with a scroll design. Ben. Shaicovitch, Pomsard Avenue, was master of ceremonies. H. Lyon, Hutchison Street spoke; then Mr. Handel; and the bar-mitzvah boy. In the procession of lighted candles, those taking part were: Mrs. Caplan, the grandmother; and Mrs. E. Davidson, of Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. M. Caplan, of Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. I. Handel, of Flushing, L. I., N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. A. Caplan, Macdonald Avenue; Mr. and Mrs. Max Handel, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. A. Lapkoff, Dornal Avenue; Mrs. B. Labkov, Park Avenue, and Max Goldman, Park Avenue; Mr. and Mrs. S. Walder, Champagneur Avenue; Mr. and Mrs. M. Silver, Esplanade Avenue; Mr. and Mrs. M. Mandl, St. Urbain Street; Mr. and Mrs. I. Brown, Isabella Avenue; Mr. and Mrs. I. Glouberman, Victoria Avenue; and Mr. and Mrs. S. Beloff, Queen Mary Road. They were followed by Mr. and Mrs. Handel, and their son, Melvin, the bar-mitzvah boy; and then by Sheila, who carried her brother's Talith. Seymour Handel, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Handel, of New York, was present with his parents.

Kosher Food In Korea

BY CHAPLAIN OSCAR M. LIFSHUTZ

We have just arrived at the outskirts of Seoul after a long trip from Chonju. We are covered with dust and we are flea-bitten and weary. We started to land at 4:30 a.m. — and it is now 11:00 p.m. Bouncing in a truck over a Korean road is an experience that shakes you loose from your morale. We're a bit settled now and our office is engaged in "kosherizing Korea," an enterprise in which the National Jewish Welfare Board gefilte fish has proved a powerful "influence". Word has gone out to the men — so now they know where to get their supplies.

The corned beef is the piece de resistance and is therefore served "after services only". You can't blame us for trying — especially when we have a monopoly on kosher corned beef in this part of the world. We had a goodly supply of JWB stationery and envelopes, but it's all gone now, and the outgoing mails are loaded with letters bearing the Mogen David in the upper left corner. Men not of the Jewish faith keep asking, "What kind of organization have you fellows got over there — fish, meat, paper and envelopes — what about us? You guys got it made" (a GI expression signifying admiration).

I distributed some JWB items among the non-Jewish men, who took them gratefully and then mused aloud about the reaction of their friends, receiving letters from them on paper bearing a Jewish star and the words "National Jewish Welfare Board" printed across the top. I assured them they were in good company and added that in the good old USO days we were partners with their organizations. But they're still mighty curious about the outfit that ships "all that good stuff" to the Jewish chaplain.

To cap the climax, I received some salamis from Shea Schwartz of the JWB San Francisco office via air mail. That brought the house down! The entire mail section watched in awed silence as the precious parcel, unmistakably identified as to contents, was handed over to me. The boys then hastened to exact a solemn promise that they would be "remembered" (for services rendered). Where I hid the salamis no one knows — except my house boy and me — and him I cautioned to guard them with his life. But I have promised to unveil the salamis in a couple of days, at the birthday party of Chaplain Denelfo, the Catholic padre in our office. By the way, it was Chaplain Denelfo who provided us with a chapel for the High Holy Day services.

Protestant Chaplain Kirkpatrick (from deep in the heart of Texas and a-longin' to return) has helped me greatly through this campaign. Chaplains get lonely, too, and when evenings grow cold and bleak — no lights, no comfort, no nothin' — and the prospect of being alone becomes increasingly disagreeable — companionship is a warm and wonderful blessing. The soul warms up and the spirit comes alive. For his fine and hearty comradeship, I am grateful to this colleague of mine, Chaplain Kirkpatrick. He is a Baptist, I a Jew; we seek God through different ways; but we both feel that we have found Him and serve Him faithfully. That is our blessing.

The Adaptation Of Jewish Culture And Music In The Home

BY RABBI NORMAN N. SHAPIRO, GOEL TZEDEC SYNAGOGUE, TORONTO

Of late more emphasis has been placed on Jewish culture than ever before. Israel has come into her own and out of the armies, and the chalutzim, and in the proud citizens of Israel has sprung a new feeling. It has been recorded on human memory. The music is new, fresh and vital. I do not speak of the folk song that had its roots in the European countries. I do not speak of the songs that have founded their way to Israel from the Americas. I speak of a music and a sound that is peculiarly Israel's own. It has come from Yemen. Borne on the same wings that returned the Yemenite to his rightful home.

It has come from the nets that brush the sea bottom at Kfar Blum. It has come from the smoke that ascends from the chimneys of the Potash works. It has been taken directly from the sound of the hammer, from the rhythm of the tractor, from the lazy dust that drifts through the window of the kindergarten rooms, from the street vendor, from the white beaches, from the streetcar rails, from the chamsin, from the elders, from the builders, from the children, from the animals... from the heart of a people.

It is strange that one instrument can capture the full meaning of the Israeli music. It may be the shepherd's flute, it may be a single drum, it may be the violin. The most noticeable thing throughout the new Israeli music is a continuous, almost imperceptible heartbeat. Some people would say that it is simply rhythm, but we Jews know better. We know that Israel speaks through its music, through tongues that have been silent since the destruction of its great and proud Temple. Each new song that is sung is as tangible a part of the reconstruction of the Temple, as a brick, or a stone or a piece of ebony wood. The accomplishments of the Israeli are causing the music to approach crescendo. Israel's music is a pattern of harmonious dissonances.

New York has ever been one of the main lifelines for Jewish education and culture. There it is as natural to ask for a piece of Jewish liturgical music, or a book on our musical culture as it would be to back down the musical history to the origins of jazz. Here in Canada it has made me proud to find the Hebrew and Jewish musics from all over the world. It is becoming commonplace to ask for Hava Nageela, Anu Hapalmach, or even a "Breivele Der Mame".

In most Jewish homes, the record player holds an important spot in the living room or den. The medium of recordings has been recognized among the finest for teaching children. The new plastic and vinylite records make it unnecessary for the parent to be in constant attendance when the children use the machine. Jewish culture and education are of prime importance, and what better way than placing the Jewish music within the reach of your child. I have seen our children unconsciously respond to Hebrew music upon being exposed to it for the first time. It is miraculous to watch them feel the blood of the prophets and their ancestors course through their veins.

It is an excellent way for them to learn a certain amount of Hebrew. During the summer they get a good deal of Hebrew in their camping life. Why allow them to forget the beauty of the camp songs and beautiful Hebrew music they have learned there? Increase their record libraries with music and the dance. There are even on sale today records combining Jewish and Hebrew music with dance instruction, and simple tunes printed on sheet music for those children who are engaged in piano lessons. It is somewhat amusing to note that the top tune on the hit parade for some weeks was a simple round, sung in many Jewish camps for a long time before its bouncy tune and rhythm were paraded before a critical and credulous public.

We should have been proud of Tzena long before the non-Jewish public made it a sensation. Tzena, Tzena, Tzena, sing the little gentile children, "Come out, come out," they sing in Hebrew, knowing of what they say, only that music is a common denominator. How ironical it is to find a culture or a part of a Jewish culture which had been retarded for so long, now embraced by everyone, because one of the secrets of peace is the right to be different. The song is new. It is different, but it has universal appeal. It fits in nicely with the other contributions of the Jew to society at large. I hesitate to use such a homely analogy to make a point, but, carried further, the adaptation of Jewish culture and music in the Jewish home will make it less strange to everyone and also insure its becoming a common bond and linking the Jew with all other peoples who have donated of their rich heritages to the melting pots of other nations.

In addition it teaches us so many things that we have forgotten, or perhaps neglected to learn. I did not mention the most important music of all, the music of the synagogue. Now, today we can have the finest cantors and choirs in the world at our hearthside. We can hear the music that for some is a way of returning to childhood with our parents, or the forgotten link with cheder, or the elusive melodies that our elders used to hum. The beauty of the Jewish liturgical music is unparalleled. To be able to listen to the Kol Nidre as often as one desires, to hear the Kiddush, to enjoy the portions of the service as one does at the synagogue, this is the function of the Jewish music today; to teach and to entertain.

Give your children the privilege of buying Jewish recordings and sheet music. Give them the benefit of the Jewish and Hebrew music, and who knows, in time, through music you may turn back to the synagogue with a new understanding, and new values. Music may help you to become at one with your people.

The Jewish Community Center of Bridgeport, Conn., is among the organizations which are backing the Board of Education in a plan for sex education that includes free lectures on the subject to parents. Many parents have objected to sex education in the classroom on the ground that such instruction should not be given on a mass basis owing to the differences in temperament, knowledge and receptivity among children. The Catholic Church has objected strenuously to sex instruction in public schools on the ground that such teaching is a responsibility of parents assisted by their religious advisers.

Proper food habits are developed in childhood. It is up to the parents to set good dietary examples at the family table. Proper eating means better health and better citizens.

agencies make provision for transportation, but for those who wish to return of their own free choice, no funds are available? If our overall aim is the maximum adjustment of the individual and his family, why should we not be as ready to provide his transportation from the United States to Europe as the reverse? The present policy seems geared more to protective considerations (since an alien who is deported at Government expense may not subsequently re-enter) than it is to the real needs of the individual family. Similar problems are involved in the case of separated families where the European members have little immediate prospect of immigrating, and in instances where an immigrant may wish to undertake a second migration to Israel.

I hope that my colleagues will not think I have gone out of my way to emphasize the shortcomings of overseas services. There can be no question about the magnificent work which these agencies and their staffs have done and continue to do in the face of handicaps which would discourage most of us. However, I was asked to pose some of the questions in the minds of local workers and this I have tried to do.

CLASS IN COOKERY

two eggs
one-quarter teaspoon salt
one pound cooked beef two cups flour (approximately) one small onion

Put meat through food chopper, add fried onion, salt and pepper to taste. To make dough, mix the eggs, salt, flour, and water. Knead until elastic. Roll out thin and cut dough into two-inch squares. Place a spoonful of meat in the centre of each square, fold one corner over diagonally to form a triangle and press the edges firmly together. Work quickly or the dough will become too dry. Allow the kreplach to stand for about ten minutes, then drop them into boiling salted water and cook for one-half hour. Remove from water and add to soup.

Mrs. I. Sandys,
4611 Hutchison Street, Montreal.

DATE SQUARES

one-half teaspoon salt
one teaspoon baking powder
one-half teaspoon baking soda two and one-half cups rolled oats one-half to three-quarters cup brown sugar
two cups pastry flour
one cup butter or butter and shortening one and one-half pounds pitted dates one and one-half cups boiling water
one teaspoon vanilla

Sift together flour, salt, baking powder, and baking soda. Mix rolled oats with brown sugar, and add to flour. Add butter, cut finely. Cook dates in boiling water until thickened, making a paste; then remove from heat and add vanilla. Cover a greased shallow pan with half of rolled oats mixture. Spread it with cool date paste. Pour remaining rolled oats mixture on top, no more than three-quarters of an inch thick. Brown lightly in a moderate oven, 350 degrees from forty-five to sixty minutes. Cut in squares while warm. Cool before removing from pan.

Jolson Will Shows Wide Sympathies

Twenty religious, charitable, benevolent and educational institutions will inherit 90—per cent of the estimated $4,000,000 estate left by Al Jolson, the singer, it was disclosed when the executors petitioned Surrogate William T. Collins, of New York, to accept jurisdiction over the estate.

The petition said that Mr. Jolson, who died in San Francisco was a resident of California and had on deposit with the Irving Trust Company cash and securities valued at more than $2,760,000 representing 75 per cent of the estate. Most of the eighteen organizations named as residuary legatees have headquarters in New York, the executors said.

The will, drawn on September 30, 1949, named as executors Charles Schwartz, an attorney, and the Irving Trust Company and directed them to set up a trust of $1,000,000 for the benefit of the singer's wife, Erle Jolson, of Encino, Calif., who receives the income for life.

He also set up trusts of $500,000 each for his two adopted children, Asa, aged 2, and Alicia, one, both of whom live with their foster mother. The children are to receive the income from their trusts for life.

Mr. Jolson also directed that a trust of $100,000 be created for the benefit of a former wife, Ethel Welmar, of Amityville, L. I. The latter, according to the will, is known also as Claire Osborne. She is to receive the income for life.

Upon termination of the various trusts the principal of each reverts to the residuary estate.

Mr. Jolson bequeathed $200,000 to the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Los Angeles, to be known as the "Al Jolson Fund," and $50,000 to the Northwood Sanitarium at Saranac Lake, N. Y.

The residuary estate is to be shared equally by the following organizations: Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies; Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of New York; Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies of New York; Free Synagogue Child Adoption Committee; Hebrew National Orphan Home; Society of St. Vincent de Paul; Orphans Home and Asylum of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Also the Home for Aged and Infirm Hebrews of New York; New York Association for the Blind; Palestine Light House; Hadassah; Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society; American Red Cross; Memorial Hospital; and the Actors Fund of America.

Mr. Jolson also named as residuary legatees Columbia University, New York University and the City College and directed that the legacies be used for needy students.

While the value of these legacies could not be determined, it was estimated that the residuary bequests and interests in the various trusts would eventually exceed $100,000 each.

Mr. Jolson also left legacies of $10,000 each to his brother, Harry Jolson, of Los Angeles; his stepsister, Gertrude Solod, of Baltimore, and to his stepbrothers, Michael, George, and Emil Jolson, all of Washington. He also left specific legacies to several friends.

Our sight is by far the most important of our senses and one of the most overworked. Modern living imposes many stresses on the eyes. They should be protected by the use of proper lighting and by glasses if the latter are prescribed by a physician.

High Court Voids Real Estate Pact Barring Jews, Negroes

The Supreme Court of Canada on November 20 declared invalid a covenant that prohibited the sale of certain properties along Lake Huron to any person of the Jewish, Hebrew, Semitic, Negro or colored race or blood. The property is located at Beach of Pines near the Lake Huron resort town of Grand Bend, Ont.

The Supreme Court in its 4 to 1 decision, reserved judgments of the Ontario Supreme Court and the Ontario Court of Appeals. Mr. Justice C. H. Locke disagreed with four of his colleagues on the Supreme Court of Canada bench. He did not think the court should interfere with the unanimous judgments of the Ontario courts.

The Supreme Court of Canada held that the covenant was against the public interest, was unenforceable on racial grounds and was a restraint on the freedom of sale of property.

The high court declared void a covenant which had been in effect since 1933 when a group of people banded together and bought property at the Beach of Pines. They agreed the property should never be sold to anyone of Jewish, Hebrew, Semitic, Negro or colored race or blood.

The case arose when Mrs. Annie Maud Noble of London, Ont., who had agreed to the covenant, sold her property to Bernard Wolf, of London, member of the Jewish community, in 1948 for $6,800. They jointly sought a court order declaring the covenant did not bar the transaction, but the Ontario courts ruled the covenant was valid and enforceable.

Now, the Supreme Court in a four-to-one decision has ruled it was not enforceable. Among reasons given for throwing out the covenant, one was that it was void because it was personal and did not run with the land through future transactions beyond the original one between covenantor and covenantee.

Another main reason was on the ground of uncertainty, in certain respects, such as that the covenant failed to indicate the intention of the parties as to the amount or degree of the prohibited race or blood that might be permitted to own the property.

Europe Revisited

It was good to revisit London, England. There is no city in Europe like unto historic London. One gets the impression that the people of England, despite their present austerity programme and the suffering that they had endured during the terrible years of World War II, are undergoing a renewal and are seeking a fresh start in the ways of democratic living. There is no doubt that the English experiment in socialism is bound to stay. The people for the most part, find in this experiment a sense of security, a form of legislation which tends to make life secure from the cradle to the grave. The process of nationalisation in many departments of life, is there to stay in England even if the present Labour government is moved out of power.

There is a confidence among the British and a strength that speaks of calmness and of vitality in British democracy. One is impressed in particular with the general decency on the part of the British. Even the taxi-cab man will be scrupulous in giving you the right change and say thank you when he realizes that you know little about English money, as a foreigner. One, of course, regrets that Great Britain, up to yesterday a first class world power, has now been reduced to a third-rate power. Nevertheless, the people breathe an optimism not found in any other part of Europe.

It was our privilege on a Sabbath morning to worship in the bombed out Liberal Synagogue on St. John's Wood Road. It was a joy to listen to our friend, the Honorable Lily Montague, one of the most distinguished of Jewish women in the British Isles, preach the sermon in this Sabbath worship. Memorable, too, was the Sabbath afternoon we spent in her lovely home, "Redlodge", where a number of London Jewry's prominent men and women had gathered for Sabbath afternoon tea. Here is a lady of prominence and wealth and talent, who has given of herself to the cause of Liberal Judaism. Miss Montague has, indeed, written a glorious chapter in the history of religion and social endeavour. Not only in Britain, but in many other parts of the world. Certainly by her work, she does honour to the memory of her father, the First Lord Swathling.

From our visit to Italy and France, we are convinced that the people of Europe are under a fierce psychosis. They see a third world war in the making. Not only a third war in the making, but they also fear the breaking out of civil war in many parts of the continent. There is a bitterness and a fatalism. Despite the Marshall Plan which is pumping into Europe economic and military aid, Europe, the patient, is critically ill and the people, bled out by wars, have lost faith. In its present condition Europe cannot survive. The only hope for Europe lies in a Union of all countries, not only a military union but an economic and a cultural union where the attempt will be made to provide people throughout the continent with decent standards of living. One need only walk through the streets of Rome and Paris and experience what little faith there is in the monetary systems of these countries. How the black market thrives at every turn of the road!

In Italy we were thrilled again to walk the streets of Rome and to revisit its ancient ruins and its old shrines. It was a joy for us to be the guests of Murray Gitlin, executive director of the Joint Distribution Committee, who so graciously saw to it that we witnessed the spectacular performance of Rossini's Opera, "Moses." There were ten thousand people in the audience by moonlight at this great performance.

Of course, this being holy year, we mingled with pilgrims in Vatican City and in St. Peter's. We renewed a visit to the Church where rests Michaelangelo's great work, "Moses." There we sat in the presence of this great creation and meditated both on the genius of the great Jewish law-giver and the genius of the great Italian artist.

Memorable was our visit to the majestic synagogue on the Tiber at a regular Sabbath eve service. We found great satisfaction that the synagogue was well attended by both young and old. One gets the impression that Italian Jewry may be experiencing a revitalization. Perhaps the influx of some Jews from West Europe has helped in this direction. Italian Jewry has had a glorious past but in recent years has certainly undergone a decline.

On my four previous visits to Rome, I had made it a point to go to the Arch of Titus, the monument erected by the Romans to commemorate the final destruction of the Jewish State and the Jewish people. What irony this monument presents. And so again this time I found my way to the Arch in the company of friends, reflecting on the power of the spirit in contrast to the power of the sword. The Romans thought when they erected this Arch of Titus in the year 70 that the story of the Jew was ended for all time to come. How foolish are the ways of the powerful! For here I was on my return from the New Israel, the symbol of renewed Jewish life, revisiting the monument which supposedly speaks of death and destruction of the Jewish people. "Am Yisroel Chai", Glory To God, that Israel is eternal even as the God of Israel is everlasting.

From Rome we flew across the Alps to Paris. One cannot help being lifted to great spiritual heights as one soars through space. How marvelous are the wonder works of God! How marvelous, too, are the wonder works of man in whom God has planted the wisdom by which to create the airplane that enables man like a bird to fly. But man must be humble, though he thinks he has conquered the earth. He must realize that above all reigns God, to whom he must pay homage.

It was good to see Paris, the city still of laughter and joy. It is a great city and breathes the spirit of liberty and equality and fraternity, historically associated with the people which risked a bloody French Revolution in order to establish the rights of man.

London, Rome, and Paris, these three great cities are to be reverenced and cherished for their history, for their art and for the great causes of freedom and liberty which they symbolize in civilization. May God grant that these capitols will never again be victimized by war! This is a time of great anxiety for the people of all lands and in particular for the people of Europe who stand on the cross road between two great powers. May it be given yet for the people of Britain and Europe to be united in the cause of peace and human freedom.

Jewish Groups Honor U.S. Justice

Associate Justice William O. Douglas of the United States Supreme Court, who was honored by two Jewish groups for his contributions to human welfare, warned the United States it would be a "great tragedy" if this nation "let the military be our spokesman" in efforts to assist backward nations of the earth.

Justice Douglas said that the most effective way to combat Communism in Southeast Asia and elsewhere is to help the peoples in backward countries obtain the social reforms which they seek. The Communists get control, he said, not by selling Marxism but by capitalizing on abuses.

Justice Douglas spoke first at a luncheon of the sixth annual conference of the Metropolitan Council of Bnai Brith and later at the fifth annual Charter Day dinner of Yeshiva University. Both were held at the Astor Hotel.

In arguing against extensive military influence in American foreign policy, Justice Douglas said it would be shameful if America allied itself with reaction and tyranny in suppressing present-day revolutions by peoples seeking freedom.

Speaking at the Yeshiva University dinner, he said: "This university is a part of the front line concerned not with military matters but with the vastly important problems of the mind and the spirit. Men of learning, men of faith, men devoted to the ideals of freedom — these men rather than those trained in the military tradition are the real security of a nation."

Asserting that religious training and outlook are of "inestimable aid" in advancing the cause of liberty and humanity, he said: "We can reach the peoples of the earth only through spokesmen who have that perspective and understanding. It will be the great tragedy of this hour if we let the military be our spokesmen. The military mind knows only how to destroy. We need to do a vastly more difficult task.

"We need to create tolerance, understanding, good will in the world. We need to show the people of the earth the warm and generous heart of America. It is foolhardy to do it recklessly, throwing away our wealth and squandering our fortunes. They need sympathy and understanding, not money.

"There are revolutions in the world which need management and direction. Revolution is a great heritage of American life. Millions of the people of the earth are trying to do today for themselves and their children what our forefathers did for us in 1776. It will be shameful if, when the history of the period is written, America is credited with suppressing these struggles, with aligning itself on the world scene with reaction, tyranny and oppression."

In his speech at the B'nai B'rith luncheon Justice Douglas selected India and Israel for special praise as new democracies establishing large-scale social reforms for the benefit of all the people.

Referring to trips he has made during the last two summers "from Greece to Siam," he said people everywhere desire freedom, peace, stability and security, reports the New York Herald Tribune.

"These people do not understand our speeches about freedom and democracy," he added. "When they think of freedom they think of ridding themselves of slavery, including establishing land reforms in countries where the land is largely held by a few people, where most people are tenants, where people are illiterate and where public health is a serious problem. In most of these areas there is no such thing as a free election. These are the problems they are talking about and for which they want help."

When the United States assists financially the governments of those backward countries, he said, "we are in a sense supporting those governments in the eyes of their people." Even more than money, he added, the peoples of the backward countries need social reforms which the United States should support.

position of the Jew in America is kept sound and safe we will be of little use to Jews in Israel or elsewhere." He urged strong support of the manifold operations of the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League in the fields of community relations, social action, Jewish education, scientific analysis of prejudice and other pro-democracy tasks.

Benjamin Epstein, national director of the Anti-Defamation League, told the delegates that the colleges today "are undergoing a quiet, democratic revolution which is perhaps the most encouraging factor in the entire effort to eliminate racial and religious discrimination from American life."

ble does not stop. Evening and week-end classes are held for those who settle in cities and towns and correspondence courses are provided for those who go to the outlying areas. The radio is used to help them and a newspaper, The New Australian, is published for them in simple English.

The Australian Government says it is too early to say whether its historic undertaking is successful, as it is only about two years old, but the favorable comments it has received are considered highly encouraging. The real test will come when, with their two-year work contract behind them, the newcomers will be free to go, live and work where they please.

MOOSE hunting is now illegal in Ontario. This was made necessary by the rapid decline in the moose population. A few years' protection will restore this fine game animal to sufficient numbers for hunting. Conservation today saves your outdoor pleasure for tomorrow.
